GIRLS: THICKEN AND BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR.
Bring Back Its Gloss, Lustre, Charm and Get Rid of Dandruff—Try The Moist Cloth.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair: soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine. It is easy and convenient to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yet—but really now hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower; destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, make a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.—Adv.

OLD SUIT IS TRIED

George Roth Sues a Settlement From Coko Company.

Special to The Courier.

UNIONTOWN, Oct. 7.—The suit of George Roth against the East Conneltsville Coko Company was taken up today in civil court before Judge Umbel. Roth alleges that he was ignored by other stockholders after he had, it is alleged, been instrumental in obtaining the coal for the company.

He sues to recover the value of 150 shares at $100 each, and any profits that may have accrued since the company was organized in 1906.

Roth states that he was instrumental in obtaining 121 acres of coal in German and Georges townships, but that he has been ignored by J. K. Atkins, A. S. and C. W. Brazell and J. E. Boyd, other members of the company. The case was tried before, carried to the supreme court, and returned to the county courts for another trial.

Before Judge Van Swearingen the case of J. W. Allen of Luzerne township against the Greensboro Gas Company was started. Allen claims $250 he alleges is due on a lease.

QUICK CURE FOR ECZEMA
San Cura Ointment is a Marvellous Remedy for Many Other Distressing Afflictions.

San Cura Ointment has cured thousands of cases of itching, bleeding and protruding sores. It has drawn the poison from and completely healed running sores and fever sores which were so old and chronic that every one who saw them considered them hopeless.

San Cura Ointment is guaranteed by Graham & Co., Conneltsville, Pa. Lowe & Co., Scottsdale, to do as stated above and also to banish tetter, salt rheum, boils, carbuncles, to heal ulcers, cuts, burns, scald and bruises, or money back.

The same guarantee holds good for chilblains, chapped hands and face, so you risk not a penny when you buy a jar for 25 or 50 cents.

For tender skin and a desire to perfect the complexion use San Cura Soap. It's the best soap for babies, too, as it kills all germs.—25 cents. Thompson Medical Co., Titusville, Pa.

NO RED FIRE
Burgess Says It Will Be Barred from Halloween Parade.

Burgess J. L. Evans who inaugurated the Conneltsville idea of Halloween celebrations, announced today that he will begin preparations soon for the big time on the night of October 31. A program of events similar to that of last year will be arranged except that there will be no red fire, the disastrous experience of last year when two little girls were burned, having put the ban on this form of illumination.

As usual the school children will parade in fantastic array, and gifts in the form of fruit, candy and trinkets will be given them.

Committees will be appointed to assist the burgess in making the necessary preparations. If possible the celebration will be made more enjoyable than ever before.

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER
But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. LeClear's Health—Her Own Statement.

Detroit, Mich.—"I am glad to discover a remedy that relieves me from my suffering and pains. For two years I suffered bearing down pains and got all run down. I was under a nervous strain and could not sleep at night. I went to doctors here in the city but they did not do me any good."

"Seeing Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised, I tried it. My health improved wonderfully and I am now quite well again. No woman suffering from female ills will regret it if she takes this medicine."—Mrs. JAMES G. LECLEAR, 326 Hunt St., Detroit, Mich.

Another Case.
Philadelphia, Pa.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is all you claim it to be. About two or three days before my periods I would get bad backaches, then pains in right and left sides, and my head would be lashed and the doctor and he said I had organic inflammation. I went to him for a while but did not get well so I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking two bottles I was relieved and finally my troubles left me. I married and have two little girls. I have had no return of the old troubles."—Mrs. CHAS. BOELL, 2850 S. Chadwick St., Phila., Pa.

CLUB GIVES BANQUET

Traveller Organization Celebrates First Anniversary.

The Traveller Young Men's Athletic Club celebrated their first anniversary Saturday evening by holding a large banquet in their club rooms. Covers were laid for 28, while red white was used as the color scheme. The club room presented a very neat appearance with its long tables and many ornaments which were strewn about.

After the different courses were served the tables were cleared and pushed to the side while dancing occupied the remainder of the evening. Music was furnished by the club's pianola which gave very satisfactory results. A good time was enjoyed by all. One of the attractive numbers of the evening was a piano duet by the Misses Brechbill and Myers. The following were present.

IF CONSTIPATED OR
"BILIOUS" "CASCARET"

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They Work While You Sleep.

Get a 10-cent box.

Take a Cascaret tonight to cleanse your Liver, Stomach and Bowels, and you will surely feel great by morning. You men and women who have headache, coated tongue, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous, upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have backache and feel all worn out. Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets—our merely forcing a passage every few days with salts, cathartics or pills of castor oil?

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels.

Remember, a Cascaret tonight will stricken you out by morning. A 10-cent box from your druggist means healthy bowel action; a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Don't forget the children.—Adv.

STANDARD WINS.

Now Has a One-Game Edge on Continental for Lynch Cup.

Standard defeated Continental No. 2 by a 2-0 score yesterday and just now two of the three games played for the Lynch Cup Continental protested the game, objecting to the decisions of the umpires. Yesterday's game was wild. The fielding of Jones and a one-run catch of Long were features. Score by innings:

Standard 1 2 0 0 1 1 0 0—6
Continental 0 0 0 0 0 0 1 2—3

Batteries—Jones, Fultz and Brown and Weaver, Coughenour, Nicklow, Hoyer and McDade. Umpire—Hoelkenberry and Chaffin.

BALD AT 35

Cleanse the Scalp, Nourish the Hair and Never Grow Bald. Use Parlan Sage.

Don't grow bald at 35 as thousands of men do—yes, and women also. Failure to keep the hair properly nourished and the scalp free from dandruff is one of the main causes of baldness.

If your hair is thinning out, immediate action is necessary. Parlan Sage is just what you need to remove dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp, and make the hair strong, beautiful and vigorous.

This delightful and refreshing hair tonic, which is now sold at drug stores and toilet counters in 50 cent bottles, is rigidly guaranteed. If Parlan Sage does not give complete satisfaction, A. C. Parlan will return your money.

Parlan Sage surely supplies hair needs. The first application removes dandruff, invigorates the scalp and puts life and beauty into thin, dull and faded hair.—Adv.

ADVERTISING.
THE DAILY COURIER is the only daily newspaper in the Conneltsville area which has the largest circulation of the exact number of copies to be printed for distribution. Other papers furnish no figures. Advertising rates are low. The weekly edition of The Courier is the recognized organ of the Conneltsville area. It has special value as an industrial journal and as an advertising medium for such interests.

TUESDAY EVENING, OCT. 7, 1913.

FARMERS AND ROADS.

The Good Roads bond issue is being advocated by various organizations and committees over the state. The friends of the measure justify their efforts of indifference more than their opposition.

The Pennsylvania committee appointed to co-operate with the Permanent American Commission on Agriculture, Finance, Production, Distribution and the Rural Life, is out in an appeal to the farmers and other rural citizens urging them to vote for the bond issue. The circular asserts that "no greater factor can enter into the important work of placing the agriculture of our state upon a profitable basis than a well-arranged system of good public roads," and further says:

"The opportunity is now before the voters of the state to say whether they are willing that the hopeful beginning made in the direction of road improvement shall end, or whether our state, which in the importance and value of its products stands among the first in the Union shall carry this work forward until our public highways and methods of rural travel and transportation shall equal any to be found in our own country or any of the countries of the world."
The $20,000,000 bond issue ought to appeal to the farmers above all other citizens. Missionary work ought not to be necessary among them. Every farmer ought to be a missionary himself.

AS TO ADVERTISING.

Our esteemed contemporary, The News, issued a 16-page edition yesterday, and has considerable to say about its enterprise in so doing. It was a very unusual occurrence, and perhaps the neighbors may be excused for congratulating themselves. But that is no reason why The News should evolve this paragraph: "Our competitors on Saturday gave expression to a substantial truth when it said that 'the Conneltsville merchants know how and where to advertise.' A glance at The News today proves the fact most conclusively."
The Saturday edition of The Courier consisted of 21 pages carrying 15 columns of advertising and the Monday edition consisted of 16 pages carrying 12 columns of advertising. In the two days The Courier published 10 pages containing 210 columns of advertising.

The Saturday edition of The News consisted of 16 pages carrying 12 columns of advertising and the Monday edition consisted of 16 pages carrying 12 columns of advertising. In the two days The News printed 24 pages containing 21 columns of advertising.

The Conneltsville merchants do know how and where to advertise, but for proof of the fact one must look further than the columns of The News.

THE ELECTRIC FURNACE.

The electric furnace has been put into successful operation in California, but there is a danger of it being introduced into the Conneltsville coke out of the market. The reason is simple. The electric furnace demands a certain portion of charcoal as well as a large volume of electric current. Charcoal is expensive, chiefly because it is scarce and will grow more so as the coke industry grows. The electric furnace will be feasible only in localities wherein coke is scarce and high. Timber growth still plentiful and hydro-electric energy available.

The bulk of the country's pig iron will continue to be made where the coke and ore most conveniently and cheaply meet, and that is the district of which Pittsburg is the center.

The News criticizes the make-up of the Saturday edition of The Courier on the ground that it did not contain as much reading matter as it should. The criticism is just. The edition should have been 22 pages instead of 24, but the publishers did not expect such a demand upon the advertising columns as developed when the edition was scheduled and well on the way to completion. Advertisers crowded in during the late hours and ate up the space intended for reading matter. The merchants of Conneltsville certainly do know how and where to advertise.

The Conneltsville auto ordinance hit the farm wagon, too. The hitching post has been placed under city regulation.

"Some Democratic leaders are beginning to wonder why it was that the Republicans, with patronage constantly at their disposal, managed to stay in office so long," says the Conneltsville News. The organ of the Young region Democracy will wonder a great deal more before the Democratic patronage is finally divided. The experience of politics is the patronage often makes more enemies than friends.

Buttermilk is highly recommended as a municipal lag cure. The embryonic administration ought to get a few churns and set up a butter-milk factory in the basement of the city hall.

The Conneltsville News, which claims to be the official organ of the Democratic organization of Fayette county, says "Republicans of the Jefferson-Crow stripe cannot be trusted with the people's money." Senator Crow has been the head of the Republican organization of Fayette county for some years past, and his record for honesty will compare favorably with any Democratic record in a like field. It's none of our business if The News runs around unannounced. Its bite never hurt us any.

East Park Addition is coming to its own quite rapidly since it is apparent that it will have a city councilman in 1914.

The propagation of fish by the state is very properly not confined to the promotion of sportsmanship, but to the population of the streams with food fish. The conservation of our water supplies can readily be made to include a practical means of reducing the cost of living.

September temperature was not reasonable, but in this respect September was no worse than some of the months which preceded it.

The News at one time heartily favored the $50,000,000 bond issue for public roads, but it is now opposed to the measure because the money will be expended under a Republican administration. Evidently the Democratic organ's faith in Democratic success in 1914 is not very firm.

Safety First is traveling on the trolley too.

With the chestnut crop a partial failure and the buckwheat crop short, things look gloomy for the Indian Creek Valley, but Saltlick will never believe that the Democratic times did it.

The safety of our national banks is endangered in the fact that the big Kuhn bank in Pittsburgh, which was closed by the Treasury Department a couple of months ago, will soon pay its depositors in full and reopen its doors for business.

The popular way to work up an insanity defense in murder cases is to have the defendant boast of his brutality and bloodthirstiness, but the Chicago butcher seems to be overdoing it.

Japan has engaged in the coke business, but its competition will not be serious even under Free Trade.

All Illinois coal mines are not profitable, but if present prices hold out they ought to be good enough to buy at bargain sale.

Foreign cooking operations are almost wholly of the by-product type. European coal is so scarce in quantity and low in quality that the principle of conservation is called actively into play in treating it.

The fear that Collector Lowell will not be able to find enough good Democrats to fill the forty or fifty jobs he has to give out is entirely groundless. Just now the woods are full of Democrats, and all of them are good and hungry.

Sulzer is going to tell everything, but there is some doubt as to whether he is going to confess.

The ships that will visit Conneltsville on Columbus Day are not the kind that the late Christopher sailed in, but they are probably just as safe.

When the Bell Telephone Trust absorbs everybody else, perhaps the Government will absorb it and perhaps that is what the Bell people expect.

Fayette county bloodhounds seem to be the real thing, and only two scoundrels at that.

The Luckey's fire department saved Bridgeport from destruction. The fire fighters ought to have state encouragement if not state aid.

The burglars who ransacked a cleaning establishment, discarded their attire and donned newer and cleaner clothes, presumably intend to parade their crime before the Conneltsville public.

TURKEY.

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Sivas."

Turkey is a large slice of the middle ages in a state of almost perfect preservation. It is located in full retreat at the western end of Europe and also extends over the eastern end of Asia. There are 1,676,000 square miles in Turkey, or were before the Balkan states began carving it. If the officials of Turkey had been half as square as the miles the country would have gotten along better.

Turkey is a very old country and smells like it. It began to rot, unobtrusively, in 500 B. C., and by the fifteenth century has spread up the Danube like a heavy rash almost to Vienna. Since then the European nations have spent their spare time pushing Turkey back into Asia and have gotten so far along with the task that one more push will finish the job.

Turkey in Asia is composed mostly of sand and is drier than Kansas when the county attorney is making good. Its principal resource is sand and its principal products are dates, figs, wool, modern priests and smiles. Turkey exports olive oil, old hair, rugs and Midway dancers in enormous quantities, and imports wives from the Caucasus and missionaries from America in almost equal numbers. The celebrated Turkish cigarette, however, is made principally in New Jersey.

The capital of Turkey is Constantinople, which is a city of over 1,000,000 people and 7,000,000 dogs situated at the jumping off place of Europe. Other Turkish cities are Damascus, Smyrna and Baghdad, all of which were great and flourishing cities long before the calendar was reversed and started forward in the year 1 A. D.

The Turkish people consist of two classes—workers and officials. The laboring Turk is honest and very industrious. Because of this he is able to support the official class and even at times to support himself. The easiest way to get rich in Turkey is to escape and come to America. Turkey adheres to the Mohammedan form of religion which allows unlimited wives and does not interfere with politics or business. Turkey has given America the Hoochee Couchee dance, the Turkish bath and the Oriental rug, but has kindly retained the harem as an exclusively home feature.

Turkey was an absolute monarchy governed by a Sultan until a few years ago, when the young Turks arose and freed Abdul Hamid with a great bang. It is now a Constitutional monarchy. Trying to find the "One more push will finish the job," constitution is the latest Turkish diversion.

Turkey has long been detested by Europe because of its playful habit of sitting up its Christian citizens with a schmeer on holidays and feast days. Because of this Europe has been sitting off Turkey a little at a time, preferring the white portions. However, no one has yet been found with courage enough to sit off and assimilate Constantinople which will continue to be 100 per cent Turkish until the next fire.

Why Not Wear Advertised Shoes?

TAKE, FOR EXAMPLE—

A man prepares for dinner—he shaves himself with an advertised safety razor, using an advertised soap, and finishes with an advertised face powder. Then he puts on advertised underwear, advertised linen, evening dress made by an advertised tailor. Then after his dinner he is driven in his advertised automobile to an advertised show.

WHY NOT WEAR ADVERTISED SHOES.

Show us an up-to-date merchant in Conneltsville and you will find he advertises. Take your newspaper and look through it, and note whether the progressive merchant doesn't advertise. Every day the advertising line is pressing the unadvertised line a little nearer to the wall. The non-advertiser used to fight to get business—today he must fight to hold it.

Why not wear Walk-Overs, Men's or Queen Quality, Women's?—They are always good.

Culebra Cut and Its Mammoth Slides

Latest View of the Famous Cucaracha
Slide in Culebra Cut
Showing Track Raised Five Feet

The Completion of This Gigantic Ditch Under Such Unfavorable Conditions Regarded As a Marvel By the Engineering World - A Triumph of Man Over Nature.

Culebra Cut will be merely a case of getting out so much dirt," was the usual remark of the layman when he read a description of the Panama Canal in the early stages of its construction. This was true, but "the getting out of so much dirt" when slides were constantly refilling the ditch has been one of the most extraordinary and colossal tasks ever confronting a civil engineer, for slides such as have swept down the sides of Culebra Cut are unique in canal building. Only those who have been fortunate enough to actually watch the progress of the work in Panama can fully appreciate the immensity of these slides which from time to time checked the progress on the great waterway.

Much has been written about the enormous size of the gates, the vast quantities of cement consumed in lock building and of the splendid machinery to be used in operating the different things about the Canal, but little has been said in reference to the handling of the great masses of earth which have slipped into the Cut—the writers merely chronicling the fact that "another slide has occurred at Panama which may delay the opening of the Canal." Nothing is said as to how this mass of earth has been removed, nor time to time yet the removal of it by far is one of the most interesting features of the Canal work.

Honors to Colonel Galliard.
The honors of this task belong to Col. D. D. Galliard, the chief engineer of the Central Division, and it is due to the unceasing labor of this eminent army engineer that the Cut is rapidly nearing completion. Colonel Galliard has been on the job, so to speak, almost constantly for the past seven years, taking only a very limited vacation during the entire time. Slides and digging have been so constantly on his mind that recently it became necessary for him to leave the Isthmus and enter the Johns Hopkins Hospital at Baltimore for treatment on account of nervous trouble.

In order to get the correct idea of the slides and of the vast amount of digging to be done an intimate knowledge of Culebra Cut must be obtained. The length of the Cut proper is about nine miles, extending from Bas Obispo to Pedro Miguel, the former being at the end of the Gatun Lake nearest the Pacific ocean, and the latter where the first lock of the descent to the Pacific will be entered by the ships. The Cut will be three hundred feet wide at the bottom, and the water must be about forty-five feet deep to meet the surface elevation of eighty-five feet (that of the upper Gatun lock) which will be maintained through Gatun Lake from the Cut to Pedro Miguel. The Cut has a curve at nearly every mile and at these curves it is widened so as to permit ships to pass easily.

French Machinery Small.
The French, with their toy-like machinery, had made a good start when the American engineers took charge, but the Americans at once decided that the task would be hopeless unless larger machinery and more laborers were used. So, the little French cars and shovels were put up in piles and from time to time sent to the United States and sold to junk dealers. They made splendid bait for the empty stomachs of the returning to the United States. The French had already experienced some difficulty with the famous Cucaracha slide on the east bank of the Cut just south of Gold Hill, and from that time it has been the main point of the engineers, who have tried every conceivable plan known in engineering, to stop its course, but with little effect. The Cucaracha slide is caused by the slipping of the top layer of clay and earth on the sloping surface of a harder material, and during seven years it has poured over three million cubic yards of earth into the Cut. It broke about nine hundred feet back from the axis of the Canal and covers over forty-seven acres. Naturally, it is most active during the rainy season, but in January, 1913, it suddenly became active during the dry season, and carried about two million, five hundred thousand cubic yards more into the Cut. This occurred during a single night and steam shovels, cars, etc., were buried and the tracks were completely blocked for a time bringing the total amount of sliding earth from this one slide up to about six million cubic yards. The Cucaracha is perhaps the most formidable of all the slides owing to its freakishness in coming in the dry season, and it has been extremely difficult to handle.

Another variety of slides which has given no little trouble is a type known as "breaks." They are due to the steepness of the slopes and the great pressure of the superincumbent material upon the underlying layers of softer material. The best example of a slide of this character is on the west side of the Cut just north of Contractor's Hill, and it covers an area of about seventy-five acres. Already seven million cubic yards of earth have been removed on account of its activity, and the engineers declare that three million more will have to be taken out before the completion of the Canal.

On the east side of the Cut there is another slide of this type covering an area of about fifty acres. Five million cubic yards have been taken from it and much more remains to be removed. It broke back fully thirteen hundred feet from the center of the Canal.

Number of Slides.
In all there have been twenty-six slides and breaks in the Cut. Seventeen of these covered areas varying from one to seventy-five acres, and nine covered areas of less than one acre each, making in all about two hundred and twenty-five acres. It has been estimated by the engineers that the total amount of material which will be removed from the Canal because of slides will reach about twenty-two million cubic yards. These figures give some idea of the task which has confronted Colonel Galliard, for while Colonel Goethals is the chairman of the commission the chief engineer of each of the three divisions is the man upon whom the real responsibility of the work rests. This is said without the least disparagement to the ability of Colonel Goethals, for he himself is anxious that due credit should be given his assistants in this gigantic undertaking.

Even where the Cut has been sunk through solid rock slides have occurred as the rock formations of the Isthmus are brittle and dissolve to dust after exposure to the atmosphere. At one time an attempt was made to plaster the slides with cement, but this, along with the other plans to stop the slides proved futile. Sometimes the pressure on the sides of the Canal operate to make the earth bulge up at the bottom of the Cut and in one instance the writer saw the railroad tracks in the Cut raised six feet as a result, and this, too, in the dry season and during a single night. Colonel Galliard devised a plan to relieve the pressure down from the rim they appear like huge mythological monsters large amount of earth from slipping into the Canal.

In the spring of 1912 it was rumored that there had been a discovery of volcanic formations in the bottom of the Cut, and soon the entire press of the country gave out this news. The engineers, however, were not greatly alarmed, and continued to work. These vaporous emissions, which are said to have been caused by the warm atmospheric effect upon the pyrite material, stopped in July and since then nothing more has been heard of the Culebra Cut volcano. About the same time a great variety of colored stones were brought up. Many of the employees have had them cut and polished and set for various kinds of jewelry. Some of the stones are of the moonstone variety, others very like moss agate, and still another kind is a crystal-like stone hard enough to cut glass. No usable mineral has been found.

Even if slides had not occurred the digging of Culebra Cut was no easy task, for not counting these mishaps one hundred million cubic yards of earth had to be removed to complete this part of the work. While various methods have been employed in building the sea level channels at each end of the Canal only one has been employed in the Cut—digging with dynamite and steam shovels. This is easy enough, but how to manage to get the dirt out was the problem—"Transportation—get the dirt out of the way" was the cry. For this purpose hundreds of miles of trucks were laid in the Cut, seventy-five of which had to be shifted almost constantly as the work progressed, and this work alone kept several hundred men busy day and night.

Two Carloads of Rock in One Dip.
Various kinds of steam shovels were used but the ones operating in the Cut excavations are nearly all of the "five-yard dipper" variety. When full each dipper carries a two-horse cart load of rock. Of course, the rock is loosened by dynamite, and it is the work of the shovel to scoop it up and dump it on the flat cars. There is something fascinating about the big, clumsy looking machines, and their work seems so accurate that one almost forgets that there is a human brain touching the proper lever. Look down from the rim they appear like huge mythological monsters feasting on great chunks of rock, but a more intimate acquaintance reveals the fact that they are machines manufactured in the United States and operated by American engineers. Each operator is so proud of the work of his shovel as a racer is of his speedy automobile, and there is great rivalry over steam shovel records—each man trying to get out the most dirt.

Perfect System of Signals.
The railroading in the Cut will always stand out as one of the world's greatest marvels of transportation, for a train passes every three minutes filled with rocks and earth, yet the accidents are comparatively few. The best way—in fact, the only way to study this railroad problem is to walk through the Cut. To be sure the trip is warm and fatiguing and in a measure dangerous, but the danger can be avoided by watching the trains in crossing and in keeping off the tracks. During the height of the work about six thousand men labored in the Cut, and these men who from the rim looked like ants suddenly became active human beings when one stands in the Cut. The trains run in two directions, for some of the material is sent to the dump while the best quality of the stone was sent toward the Atlantic to be used in building the Gatun dam or to be utilized in building the breakwaters at each end of the Canal.

Water Turned Into the Cut.
The rock excavation in the Cut has been practically completed and all steam shovels and drills were taken from the ditch the latter part of September. The lock construction at Gatun is so far advanced that the water was turned into the Cut through the Gamboa dyke during the early part of October. Ten of the best steam shovels from the Cut are at present removing material from the east and west banks of the Cut, near the town of Calov. This is being done to lessen the danger of slides. The removal of material from the banks will continue until about May, 1914. The engineers expect the water to give stability to the sides of the Cut, but they do not expect the slides to cease until after the sides of the Canal have attained repose, and this will require several months.

PLANS FOR DECEMBER SUFFRAGE CONVENTION.

Determined Effort Made to Secure Favorable Action by Congress.

Arrangements have been completed for the convention of the National American Woman Suffrage association, which is to open in Washington Dec. 1. The opening of the convention will be coincident with the opening of the regular session of congress, and the suffragists plan to do their utmost during their meeting to secure action by congress on the proposed constitutional amendment giving nation wide "votes for women."

On the afternoon of Sunday, Nov. 30, a mass meeting will be held in New Massillon temple, and in the evening a conference of delegates will be held at the Bellevue hotel, which is to be the headquarters of the convention.

Monday night Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the association, will be the principal speaker. Tuesday night Judge Julian Mack, formerly of the Chicago juvenile court, will speak on "Woman's Relation to the Law," and other night addresses will be made by Miss Maude Minor, prohibition officer of the New York night court, and by Mrs. J. T. Bowen of the Chicago juvenile court.

Wednesday the Men's League for Woman Suffrage will have charge of the program, and Thursday evening Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the International Suffrage alliance, will be the principal speaker. Miss Jane Adams, vice president of the National Council of Woman Voters, will also speak during the week. Special attention is to be paid during the convention to consideration of methods of extending suffrage in the south and east. Mrs. Arthur Livermore of New York will discuss some new plans.

Mrs. Alice Paul, chairman of the congressional committee for woman suffrage, is in charge of the arrangements in Washington.

PLAN U. S. AVIATION CENTER.

Army Men Propose to Spend $1,000,000 on the Project.

Plans tentatively adopted for an army aviation center at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., which include buildings costing about $180,000, are being considered by the chief of the quarter-master corps of the army, Major General Alshire.

It also has been proposed to buy at least two nonrigid dirigibles which probably would have to be purchased abroad at a cost of $175,750 each, as no attempt has been made to manufacture the larger types in this country. A rotating hangar, costing $122,500, also has been recommended, and this, with sixteen automobile tractors, would bring the cost of the proposed plant and equipment, including provision for personnel, up to about $1,000,000.

NEW AEROPLANE RECORD.

Gaulloux Travels 118 Miles in Fifty Minutes With a Passenger.

A remarkable flight, establishing a new cross country record, has just been made by the French aviator, Eugene Gaulloux. With a passenger he covered 118 miles from his home at Savigny-sur-Braye to Paris in fifty minutes. This was at the rate of nearly 142 miles an hour.

Gaulloux recently established the single day record of 857 1/2 miles.

Curious Ear of the Catfish.

The catfish uses his lungs as an organ of hearing. The needless lung becomes a closed sac filled with air and commonly known as the swim bladder. In the catfish, as in the suckers, chubs and most brook fish, the air bladder is large and is connected by a slender tube, the remains of the trachea, to the esophagus. At its front it fits closely to the vertebral column. The anterior vertebrae are much enlarged, twisted together, and through them passes a chain of bones, which connects with the hidden cavity of the air. The bladder therefore assists the ear of the catfish as the tympanum and its bones assist the ear of the higher animals. An ear of this sort can carry little range of sound. It probably gives only the impression of juts or disturbances in the water.

"Well," I asked, "did you change my basket into a dead rabbit?"

"Basket?" he said, looking up.

"What basket?"

I looked everywhere, but the basket was gone, and after a while I decided that Mr. Dick had had an attack of thoughtfulness (or hunger) and had carried it out himself.

And all the time I looked for the basket Mr. Pierce sat with the gun across his knees and stared at the rabbit.

"I'd thank you to take that messy thing out of here," I told him.

"Poor little chap!" he exclaimed. "He was playing in the snow, and I killed him—not because I wanted food or sport, Minnie, but—well, because I had to kill something."

"I hope you don't see those attacks often," I said. He looked at the rabbit and sighed.

"Never in my life!" he answered. "For food or sport, that's different, but—bloodlust! He got up and put the gun in the corner, and I saw he looked white and miserable."

"I didn't like to scold him when he was feeling bad anyhow, but business is business. So I asked him how long he thought people would stay if he acted as he had that day. I told him, too, to remember that he wasn't responsible for the morals or actions of his guests, only for their health."

"Health!" he echoed, and kicked a chair. "Health! Why, if I wanted to keep a good dog in condition, Minnie, I wouldn't bring him here."

"No," I retorted, "you'd shut him in an old oven, and give him a shoe to chew, and he'd come out in three days frisking and happy. But you can't do that with people."

"As far as Mr. von Inwald goes," I went on, "that's not your affair or mine. If Miss Patty's own father can't prevent it, why should you worry about it?"

"Precisely," he agreed. "Why should I? But I do, Minnie—that's the devil of it."

He said good night and went out, taking the gun and the rabbit with him, and I went into the pantry to finish straightening things for the night. In a few minutes I heard voices in the other room, one Mr. Pierce's, and one with a strong German accent.

"When was that?" Mr. von Inwald's voice.

"A year ago, in Vienna."

"Where?"

"At the 21st Tabarin. You were in a lingo. The man I was with told me who the woman was. It was she, I think, who suggested that you loan over the rail."

"Ah, so!" said Mr. von Inwald as if he just remembered. "Ah, yes, I recall—I was with—the lady was red-haired, is it not? And it was she who desired me."

"You loaned over the rail and poured a glass of wine on my head. It was very funny. The lady was charmed."

"I recall it perfectly. I remember that I did it under protest—it was a very fine wine, and expensive."

"Then you also recall," said Mr. Pierce, very quietly, "that because you were with a woman I could not return your compliment? But I demanded the privilege at some future date when you were alone."

"It is a pity," replied Mr. von Inwald, "that now, when I am alone, there is no wine!"

"No, there is no wine," Mr. Pierce agreed slowly, "but there is—"

I opened the door at that, and both of them started. Mr. von Inwald was standing with his arms folded, and Mr. Pierce had one arm raised holding up a glass of spring water. In another second it would have been in the other man's face.

I walked over to Mr. Pierce and took the glass out of his hand, and his expression was funny to see.

"I've been looking everywhere for that glass," I said. "It's got to be washed."

Mr. von Inwald laughed and picked up his soft hat from the table. He turned around at the door and looked back at Mr. Pierce, still laughing.

"Accept my apologies!" he said. "It was such a fine wine, and so expensive."

Then he went out.

CHAPTER VIII.

I was pretty nervous when I took charge of the news stand that evening. Amanda King had an appointment with the dentist and had left everything topsyturvy. I was still straightening up when people began to come down to dinner.

Two or three things happened that night. For one, I got a good look at Miss Julia Summers. She was light-haired and well-dressed, with an ugly face but a pleasant smile. She wore a lace-trimmed dress that made Miss Cobb's with the yoke look like a sackcloth collar, and if she had a broken heart she didn't show it.

"Hello!" she cried, looking at my hair, "are you selling tobacco here or are you the cigar-light?"

"Neither," I answered, looking over her head. "I am employed as the extinguisher of my guests."

"Owed," she said, smiling. "I'm something else at that myself. Suppose I stay here and help. If I watch that line of hairless women I'll be crooked."

anything to do. As Mr. Sam said, Mr. Pierce didn't want to stay, anyhow, and as likely as not if we went to him in a body and told him he must come to the shelter-house for instructions, and be suave and gentle when he was called down by the guests about the steam pipes making a racket, he'd probably prefer to go down to the village and take Doctor Barnes' place washing dishes at the station.

But he settled it by appearing himself. He came across the snow from the direction of Mount Hope, and he had a pair of skis over his shoulder. (At that time I didn't even know the name of the things, but I learned enough about them later.) I must say he looked very well beside Mr. Dick, who wasn't very large, anyhow, and who hadn't had time to put on his collar, and Mr. Sam, who's always thin and snailow and never takes a step he doesn't have to.

I let him in, and when he saw us all there he started and hesitated.

"Come in, Pierce," Mr. Sam said. "We've just been talking about you."

He came in, but he didn't look very comfortable.

"What have you decided to do with me?" he asked. "Put me under restraint?"

Of course, he had to be set right about the sanatorium. Mr. Sam began it. Mr. Pierce listened, sitting on the floor and looking puzzled and more and more unhappy. Finally he got up and drew a long breath.

"Exactly," he agreed. "I know you are all right and I'm wrong—according to your way of thinking. But if these Then, with one of her easy changes, she laughed and picked up her muff to go.

"Minnie and I," she said, "will tend bar here, and in our leisure moments we will pour sulphur water on a bunch of Dicky's letters that I have to cool 'em." She walked to the door and turned around, smiling.

"Carry me insurance on 'em all the time," she finished and went out, leaving us staring at one another.

CHAPTER IX.

I went to bed early that night. What with worrying and being alternately chilled by tramping through the snow and roasted as if I was sitting on a volcano with an eruption due, I was about all in.

I guess it was about four o'clock in the morning when a hand slid over my face, and I sat up and yawned. The hand covered my mouth as that, and something long and white and very thin beside the bed said: "Sh! For heaven's sake, Minnie!"

It was Miss Cobb! I lighted a candle and set it on a chair beside the bed and took a good look at her. She was shaking all over, which wasn't strange, for I sleep with my window open, and she had a key in her hand.

"Here," she gasped, holding out the key, "he's Minnie, wake the house and get him, but, oh, Minnie, for heaven's sake, save my reputation!"

"Get who?" I demanded, for I saw it was her room key.

"I have locked a man in my room!" she declared in a terrible voice, and collapsed into the middle of the bed.

Well, I leaned over and tried to tell her she'd made a mistake. The more I looked at her, with her hair standing straight out over her head, and her cambric nightgown and a high collar and long sleeves, and the hump on her nose where her brother Willie had hit her in childhood with a baseball bat, the surer I was that somebody had made a mistake—likely the man.

I sat down on the side of the bed and put on my slippers.

"What did he look like?" I asked.

"Could you see him?"

She uncovered one eye.

"Not—not distinctly," she said. "I think he was large, and—and rather handsome. That beast of a dog must have got in my room and was asleep under the bed, for it awakened me by snarling."

There was nothing in that to make me nervous, but it did. As I put on my kimono I was thinking pretty hard. I could not wake Mr. Pierce by knocking, so I went in and shook him.

"Mr. Pierce! Mr. Pierce!"

It was two or three minutes at least before I had him sitting on the side of the bed, with a blanket spread over his knees, and was telling him about Miss Cobb.

After he seemed pretty well wakened I went out. I waited in the sitting-room and I heard him growling as he put on his clothes. He was quiet when we got to the bedroom floors, however, and when we stopped outside Miss Cobb's door he was as sober as any one could wish him.

I gave him the key and he fitted it quietly in the lock. Arabelle jumped out, side, must have heard, for she snarled. But the snarl turned into a yelp, as if she'd been suddenly kicked.

Mr. Pierce, with his hand on the knob, turned and looked at me in the candle-light. Then he opened the door.

Arabelle gave another yelp and rushed out; she went between my feet like a shot and almost overthrew me, and when I'd got my balance again I looked into the room. Mr. Pierce was at the window, staring out, and the room was empty.

"The idiot!" Mr. Pierce said. "If it hadn't been for that snow-bank! Here, give me that candle!"

He stood there waving it in circles, but there was neither light nor sound from below. After a minute Mr. Pierce put the window down and we stared at the room. All the bureau drawers were out on the floor, and the lid of poor Miss Cobb's trunk was open and the tray upset.

If Arabelle Hadn't Made a Diversion I Think I Would Have Fainted.

We brought her back to her room, and she didn't know whether to be happy that she was vindicated or mad at the state her things were in. She drew my head down to her and her eyes were fairly popping out of her head.

"I feel as though I'm going crazy," Minnie said, "but the only things that are gone are my letters from Mr. Jones, and—my black woolen tights!"

I slept late the next morning, and when I'd had breakfast and waded to the spring-house it was nearly nine. As I floundered out I thought I saw somebody slink around the corner of the spring-house, but when I got there nobody was in sight. I was on my knees in front of the fireplace, raking out the fire, when I heard the door close behind me, and when I turned, there stood Mr. Dick, muffled to the neck, with his hat almost over his face.

"What the deuce kept you so late this morning?" he demanded, in a sulky voice, and limping over to a table he drew a package out of his pocket and slammed it on the table.

"I was up half the night, as usual," I said, rising. "You oughtn't to be here, Mr. Dick!"

"He was pulling something out of his overcoat pocket, an inch at a time. 'For God's sake, Minnie,' he exclaimed, 'return this—this garment to—whomever it belongs to!'"

He handed it to me, and it was Miss Cobb's black tights! I stood and stared.

"And then," he went on, reaching for the package on the table, "when you've done that, return to 'Blinkie' these letters from her Joesie."

"Don't stand and stare," he continued irritably, when I didn't make a move, "at least get that—that internal black garment out of sight."

"So it was you!" I gasped, putting the newspaper over the tights. "Why in the name of peace did you jump out of the window, and what did you want with—those things?"

"Want with those things!" he snarled. "I suppose you can't understand that a man might wake up in the middle of the night with a man craving for a pair of black woolen tights, and—"

"You needn't be sarcastic with me," I broke in. "You can save that for your wife. I suppose you also had a long longing for the love-letters of an insurance agent—"

And then it dawned on me, and I sat down and laughed until I cried.

"And you thought you were stealing your own letters!" I cried. "The ones she carries her insurance on! Oh, Mr. Dick, Mr. Dick!"

"How was I to know it wasn't Joesie Summers' room?" he demanded angrily. "Didn't I follow the dratted dog? I gave her the beast myself. Oh, I tell you, Minnie, if I ever got away from this place—"

"You've got to get away this minute," I broke in, remembering. "They'll be coming any instant now."

He got up and looked around him helplessly.

"Where'll I go?" he asked. "I can't go back to the shelter-house."

I looked at him and he tried to grin. "Fact," he said, "hard to believe, but—fact, Minnie. She's got the door locked. Didn't I tell you she is of a suspicious nature? She was asleep when I left, and mostly she sleeps all night. And just because she wakes when I'm out, and lets me come in thinking she's asleep, when she has one eye open all the time, and she sees what I'd never even seen myself—that the string of that damned garment, whatever it is, is fastened to the hook of my shoe, me thinking all the time that the weight was because I'd broken my leg jumping—doesn't she suddenly sit up and ask me where I've been? And I—I'm unsuspicious, Minnie, by nature, and I said I'd been asleep. Then she jumped up and showed me that—that thing—those things, hanging to my shoe, and who hasn't spoken to me since. I wish I was dead."

And just then a dog barked outside and somebody on the step stamped snow off his feet. We were both paralyzed for a moment.

"Julia!" Mr. Dick cried, and went white.

I made a leap for the door, just as the handle turned, and put my back against it.

"Just a minute," I called. "The carpet is caught under it!"

Mr. Dick had lost his head and was making for the spring, as if he thought, hiding his feet would conceal him. I made frantic gestures to him to go into my pantry, and he went at last, leaving his hat on the table. I left the door and flung it after him—the hat, of course, not the door—and when Miss Summers sauntered in just after, I was on my knees brushing the hearth, with my heart going three-four time and skipping every sixth beat.

"Hello!" she said. "Lovely weather—for polar bears. If the natives waded through this all winter it's no wonder they walk as if they are ham-strung. Don't bother getting me a glass. I'll get it over."

She was making for the pantry when I caught her, and I guess I looked pretty wild.

"I'll get it," I said. "That's one of the rules."

She put her hands in the pockets of her white sweater and smiled at me.

"Do you know," she declared, "the old ladies' knitting society isn't so far wrong about you! About your making rules—whatever you want, whenever you want 'em!"

She put her head on one side.

"Now," she went on, "suppose I break that rule and rot my own glass? What happens to me? I don't think I'll be put out!"

I threw up my hands in despair, for I was about at the end of my string.

"Get it then!" I exclaimed, and sat down, waiting for the volcano to erupt. But she only laughed and sat down on a table, swinging her feet.

"When you know me better, Minnie," she said, "you'll know I don't spoil sport. I happen to know you have somebody in the pantry—moreover, I know it's a man. There are tracks on the little porch, my dear girl, not made by your galoshes. Also, my dearest girl, there's a gentleman's glove by your chair there!" I put my foot on it. "And just to show you what a good fellow I am—"

She got off the table, still smiling, and sauntered to the pantry door, watching me over her shoulder.

My heart was skipping every second beat by that time, and Miss Julia stood by the pantry door, her head back and her eyes almost closed, enjoying every minute of it. If Arabelle hadn't made a diversion just then I think I'd have fainted.

She'd pulled the newspaper and the tights off the table and was running around the room with them, one leg in her mouth.

"Stop it, Arabelle!" said Miss Julia.

Mr. Sam and his wife came in at that moment, Mr. Sam carrying a bottle of wine for the shelter-house, wrapped in paper, and two cans of something or other. He was too busy trying to make the bottle look like something else—which a good many people have tried and failed at—to notice what Miss Summers was doing, and she had Miss Cobb's protectors stuffed in her muff and was standing very dignified in front of the fire by the time they'd shaken off the snow.

"Good morning!" she said. "Morning!" said Mr. Sam, hanging up his overcoat with one hand, and trying to put the bottle in one of his pockets with the other. Mrs. Sam didn't look at her.

"Good morning, Mrs. Van Alstyne!" Miss Summers almost threw it at her. "I spoke to you before; I guess you didn't hear me."

"Oh, yes, I heard you," answered Mrs. Sam, and turned her back on her. Give me a little light-haired woman for sheer devilishness!

The Stage and The Players.

THE SOISSON.

"BILLY THE KID," the successful melodrama which has for the foundation of its story some of the incidents in the life of the outlaw of that name, has, in the main part Johnnie Erwin who is generally conceded to be one of the best of the younger generation of actors. The play is said to tell a story that is replete in interest, in fact it never flags from the time the first curtain goes up until the last one falls and that it also contains plenty of good big laughs. It is said to be put upon the stage in a very elaborate manner for with the exception of a very few "props" the company carries everything else in the performance. One of the most interesting events of the season to those who have good red blood in their veins will be the coming engagement of "Billy The Kid" to the Solsson Theatre, matinee and night, Wednesday, October 8.

"FIREKICKS."

It is but a few years ago that Geo. Stratton-Porter gave to the world "Freckles." It proved a sticker to the palate of modern fiction readers, with have been many stories, strong in all intrinsic points which go to make up an absorbing story, but they are of no value to the stage—the action is lacking. "Freckles," however, is the reverse. It is stronger as a play than it was a novel.

The New York producer, A. G. Delamater, has, with considerable trouble, secured all the rights of "Freckles" for the stage. He knows the value of a story from the standpoint of a stage production, and he was quick to see the possibilities of Mrs. Porter's tale of "the limberlost." He secured the brilliant dramatist, Neil Twomey, the author of several successful plays among them "The Election," "The Angel," "The Swamp Angel," "McLean," "Mrs. Duncan," "Wissner," "Black Jack," and all the rest will be in the play.

The dramatist has followed the text of the story in a most faithful manner, and every one of the now familiar characters, "Freckles," "The Swamp Angel," "McLean," "Mrs. Duncan," "Wissner," "Black Jack," and all the rest will be in the play. Mr. Delamater has given the play a magnificent scenic inventory and has secured a strong cast of players, in a word it will be up to the degenerate Delamater to make it from the standpoint that the play is stronger than the story, it is safe to say that it will be very popular. In the short time

It was produced last season it proved a triumph from a stage point of view, and it is undoubtedly destined to be one of the most substantial successes of the decade.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON

Says He Will Build Another Boat and Try for Cup.

Sir Thomas Lipton, who lately announced that he would build another Challenger, Shamrock IV, is one of the most successful merchants in the world. He began life as an errand boy and is now worth millions. Recently he said:

"I have often been asked to define the true secret of success. It is thrift. Saving creates independence. It gives a man standing. It stimulates him with the proper energy. It brings to him the better part of success—happiness and contentment."

Those are the words of a man speaking from experience, not theory. Aren't they worth considering? Isn't a savings account, which helps to form habits of thrift, well worth while? LOTS OF ACTION.

"Sunny South" Company Gives Lively Show at the Arcade.

There is lots of action in the "Sunny South" company at the Arcade the first half of this week. A big audience witnessed the initial performance of this colored company last night. The dancing is exceptionally clever. Some of the musical numbers were very catchy and the olio was the best feature of the evening.

Ed Whine's "Talk with Charlie" is both clever and unusual. Wilber Dixon has an amusing number while Thelma Jackson sings well. The ensemble were superb. Disappointing on account of a lack of sympathy between the orchestra and the actors. Some of the comedy is really funny.
